Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter of Pittsburg, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." For Clean Advertising.
An editorial in the "American Medical" of recent date declares that physicians should help, by their subscriptions and encouragement, the few papers which exclude from their columns medical advertisements and a certain class of crime which caters to sensationalism and stuff. It also calls attention to the fact that the whiskey advertiser is taking advantage of the score in regard to bad and adulterated whiskey, and adds: "All that honorable subscribers need to do to finish the great reform thus happily inaugurated is to bring it to the editorial and publishing consciousness that whiskey, even if 'pure' and 'recognized' by the government as a 'medium,' is not recognized by the medical profession as a cure for all diseases. The worst diseases we have to fight are those of the whiskey drinkers!"

Let the good work go on. Testimony like this from such high medical source is valuable from a temperance standpoint; for many who fear neither the law nor the gospel do fear disease and death.

UNION STRIKE LOSSES.

Net Decrease of 86 Unions and 17,414 Members in New York.

New York, July 15.—Some interesting facts are given in the latest bulletin of the New York state department of labor in regard to the disastrous effect of many of the recent strikes in that state upon the labor organizations that prosecuted them. The failure of the strike on the rapid transit system in New York city resulted in the disruption of unions embracing a membership of more than 4,000 men; that of the glaziers was followed by the dissolution of a union of 500 men, while the disputes in the Fulton county glove manufacturing also caused very large losses. In some industries trade has only recently recovered from the recent depression which has greatly weakened the workmen's organizations. The Schenectady unions lost 16 per cent of their members between Oct. 1, 1904 and April 1, 1905, while Syracuse was the only large city in which unionism made any gain in numbers.

In the six months specified 165 organizations in New York state dissolved and 20 more amalgamated with other unions of the same trade. On the other hand, only 99 new unions were organized, causing a net decrease of 86, and leaving 2418 organizations in existence at the end of March. The aggregate number of members of unions was then 374,262, signifying a net decrease of 17,414 since September. While the decrease in organization was principally in the villages and smaller cities, four-fifths of the loss in membership was in the seven principal centers of industry. New York lost 8,741, or 3.4 per cent of its membership, but still had 245,978 unionists; Buffalo has 184 unions and 30,158 members; Rochester, 91 unions and 12,130 members, a decrease of 125; Syracuse, 78 unions and 8,162 members, a decrease of 528, or 6.4 per cent; Troy, 55 unions and 5,149 members, a decrease of 106, or 2 per cent; Schenectady 58 unions and 5,290 members, a loss of 1,012.

The great activity in the various building trades, the bulletin says, has, of course, created a demand for labor and has thereby imparted an impetus toward organization in those trades. In New York city the building trades unions gained 5,866 members in the six months ending March 31. Their increasing strength enabled the unions to maintain their ground in carrying out a revision of the general arbitration plan adopted by the Building Trades Employers' Association and the unions. The new plan is much more favorable to the unions than was the original plan of July, 1903.

MUSCULAR GIRLS.

Put Intruder Out of Winoski Boarding House.

Winoski, July 15.—As a result of a little row, which happened at the corporation boarding house Wednesday evening, James McCale, a stranger, was yesterday fined in justice court $5 and costs for a drunk and the same amount for a breach of the peace. McCale, who is a lodger at the house, came home on the evening in question and was looking for trouble. Finding a number of waitresses in the kitchen, he started to make himself objectionable. He grasped one of the girls, and, in the scuffle, the other girls joined in, finally throwing the man out. In passing out through the long corridor, he met some of the men lodgers and thought he could even score there. He was disappointed, and, with a sore head, he landed in the gutter. He finally wandered down by the mill store houses, where he was arrested by Special Officer Joseph Abair, who is also night watchman at the mills.

Flag Etiquette.

There have been mistakes made about the etiquette of the flag in Chicago. The Chicagoan should not make them twice. When President William McKinley was assassinated four years ago thousands of loyal Americans raised flags at half-mast over their places of business and let them fly by night and by day until they were out. They thought undoubtedly they were showing respect to McKinley's memory, but they were not showing proper respect to the flag. The United States government displayed at that time its flags at half-mast from sunrise to sunset from the president's death until his burial. The government regulations provide that on the death of a president in office its flag shall be displayed at half-mast only one day.

In memory of the 350,000 Union soldiers who lost their lives during the Civil War, on May 30, Memorial Day, each year the United States displays its flag at half-mast at all army posts, stations and national cemeteries from sunrise until midday. Immediately before noon a dirge is played by the band or field music, and the national salute of twenty-one guns is fired. At the conclusion of this memorial tribute at noon the flag is hoisted to the top of the staff and remains there until sunset. The idea is that the national ensign is too sacred an object to be long in mourning for any man or number of men, no matter how exalted their rank.

The flag reversed, with the union down, indicates distress. The flag on anything but a fort actually besieged should never be displayed between sunset and sunrise.

When the flag is to be displayed at half-mast it is lowered to that position from the top of the staff. It is hoisted to the top before it is finally lowered.—Washington Post.

Not Intended for Use.

There are some things which no man can ever learn, no matter how intelligent and earnest a student he may be.

"My dear, you look perfectly discouraged," said little Mrs. Nash's most intimate friend. "What is the matter?" "I am perfectly discouraged," said Mrs. Nash, tearfully. "You know that footrest with the handsome embroidered top that I gave George for Christmas? Well, I've noticed it had begun to look almost a little shabby and I couldn't imagine why, for it stands away from the windows, and I've taken great care of it. And when I came down earlier than usual from putting Janey to bed last night, what do you suppose I saw?"

The friend shook her head, hopelessly. "I found," said Mrs. Nash, with bitterness, "that George Nash had taken his footstool out into the center of the room, near his Morris chair, and had put his feet—with his boots on, too—right on it!"—Youth's Companion.
